

This directory is provided as a courtesy by the Mid-Hudson Lactation Consortium, a coalition of agencies and individuals dedicated to the promotion of breastfeeding as the “Gold Standard of Infant Nutrition.”

All phone numbers are in the 845 area code, unless otherwise stated.

La Leche League meetings and their support services are free of charge. Meetings are held at various locations. Pregnant women and mothers of infants and toddlers are encouraged to attend. Call a leader to get a current schedule.

Lactation consultants and other providers may charge for their services or may have eligibility requirements.

Inclusion in this directory does not reflect an endorsement of the services.

Call the hospital where you gave birth. They may have an IBCLC lactation consultant or CLC on staff.

IBCLCs are health care professionals certified by the International Board of Lactation Consultant Examiners. They provide education for the prevention of breastfeeding problems and assistance when challenging situations occur.

Did you know?

- ◆ Breastfeeding protects infants from ear infections and diarrhea
- ◆ Breastfeeding is good for mothers, too!
- ◆ The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends breastfeeding for the first year of life, and beyond.
- ◆ Formula is NOT the same as human milk, and increases certain health risks to your baby.
- ◆ Human milk is simply the right nutrition for human babies!

For more information about MHLC, or to be included as a provider in our next issue, contact Stephanie Sosnowski, MHLC Coordinator at MISN, 845-492-9027 or ssosnowski@misn-ny.org. Educational and networking meetings are held quarterly - please contact Stephanie to be added to our email contact list to receive notifications.

Going back to work?

You can:

- Ask for a private place to express or pump your breastmilk (not a bathroom!)
- Use your break time or meal time to express or pump

Your employer must help you locate a room, and must not discriminate against you for expressing or pumping. (NYS Labor Law Section 206-c). If your employer would like more information, please have them contact Maternal-Infant Services Network, 845-561-3575 ext 301
